

DIRECTORS ELECTED AT ROUSING CHAMBER OF COMMERCE MEETING

Speeches Are Made and Members
Pledge Themselves to Support
The Organization.

MEETING THURSDAY NIGHT

Action of By-Laws Committee to be Ratified and Report of Board to be Heard.

DIRECTORS MEET THURSDAY

In Afternoon at Three O'clock Officers of the Board Will be Elected.

At a rousing meeting of the Chamber of Commerce last night in the court house assembly room twenty-one directors were elected, ten for two years and eleven for one year.

A meeting of the board was called for Thursday afternoon at three o'clock in the court house assembly room to elect officers. Every board member is urged to be present and the business can be transacted in a short time.

The by-laws committee of three members, R. L. Tompkins, Judge John D. Megee and A. L. Riggs, met in the judge's office this morning at ten o'clock and prepared a draft to be presented to the membership on Thursday night.

A meeting of the whole membership will be held in the court library
on the third floor of the court house Thursday night at eight o'clock to hear the report of the board on the election of officers and ratify the action of the by-laws committee.

The crowd last night was the equal of the first meeting crowd Friday night and the enthusiasm over the success of the venture was great.
Several members spoke and all pledged their support to the organization.

F. E. Wolcott, chairman of the nominating committee of five members, introduced a resolution drafted by the committee providing for the election of eleven directors for one year and ten directors for two years so that the board would not be composed wholly of new members
each year.

The resolution was adopted unanimously and Mr. Wolcott then read the names of the directors proposed for the one-year term. Judge John D. Megee suggested that the whole list be read and that they be submitted to a vote at one time. This was adopted and the recommendations of the committee were adopted.

A. H. Schriehte, who is chairman of the committee on organization, presided and at the close of the business made a short speech calling on the members to work for the good of Rushville and Rush county, and also to express their sentiments.

Judge Megee said the Chamber of Commerce was like a church, that if the individuals were right most anything could be accomplished. He declared that many things could be done to make Rushville a better place in which to live. He said that statistics showed that Rush county is the richest county in Indiana, for its population, with the exception of Marion, of which Indianapolis is the county seat.

John A. Titsworth, who was called on next, said that the best thing any member could do was to stop any criticism. He said that whenever a member was displeased with something that was done and began to kick about it, some other member should show him that he was wrong
and that the success of the project depended on unity of thought and action.

He said that Rushville and Rush county was in good condition, but the satisfied condition made the Chamber of Commerce more necessary. He recalled that he was riding on a train in Iowa a few years ago and he heard several people talking about Waterloo. He was interested and inquired. He found that Waterloo, by organizing a commercial body which had the interests of its city at heart, had had a steady growth in population of from 8,000 in 1900 to 25,000 in 1910. He said he consulted the census and found that to be true.

Mr. Titsworth said he had been following the writings of a correspondent to an Indianapolis newspaper who had visited most of the important towns in Indiana and had found that each one of them had a commercial organization. The most recent article on Danville, he said, declared that Danville citizens had arrived at the conclusion that a commercial body was as necessary as churches and schools.

Dr. J. B. Kinsinger said he sanctioned everything that had been said and that he felt that every man and

$45 IN CASH AND $4 IN CHECKS STOLEN

Richter Grocery Store in West Third Street Entered Some Time During Night.

MONEY LEFT ON THE COUNTER

The Richter grocery store in West Third street was entered last night and forty-five dollars in cash and about four dollars in checks taken.
Entrance was gained through a rear window. The glass was smashed and the window unlocked. The robbery was not discovered until this morning when William Richter, owner of the store, opened the place for business. The police were notified but have no clue.

On closing last night Richter left the money from the cash drawer on the counter. He had counted the money and was intending to take it home with him but forgot it. The coin and bills could be seen from the front window and the supposition is that some one in passing the store saw it or else the thief was in the store when Richter closed up.

DR. KINSINGER WAS APPOINTED

Named by Council to Fill Unexpired Term of R. G. Budd as Member of City School Board.

THERE WAS NO OPPOSITION

Water Bill at Hotel Was Adjusted
and Compromise Reached—None of Old Claims Allowed.

Dr. J. B. Kinsinger, was appointed as a member of the school board last night by the city council to fill the unexpired term of R. G. Budd, whose resignation was handed the council.
Mr. Budd's term of office would have ended the first of August. Recently he was appointed ditch commissioner by Judge Megee and was forced to resign from the school board on account of the rush of other business.

Dr. Kinsinger is well known and the appointment meets with general approval. His name was presented to the council by Councilman Brann.
There was no opposition to the appointment and no other name was mentioned. With the appointment of Dr. Kinsinger, the political complexion of the board changes and is now a Republican board. The other members of the board are Bert Mullin and Harry Kramer.

The Western hotel put in a kick against paying the water rental as-recorded on the meter for the first four months. The meter was installed by the old council and from May 1 to September 1 the meter showed that the hotel used $32.40 worth of water. The hotel refused to pay the bill saying that it was too high. The matter has been hanging fire for some time and was finally compromised by taking the amount
they used for the last four months, which was $9.70. The council was of the opinion that the hotel people either allowed the water to run as they had in the past without regard to the meter or else the meter was defective. The bill will be settled for $9.70.

Last night was the time when an ordinance covering the Jackson street improvement should have been passed but the city attorney was not present. He was instructed to have the ordinance ready by the next meeting. The bond ordinance is for Vance and Wicker, the contractors.
The improvement consisted of cement curb and gutter and the work has been completed about five months. The contractors were given part of their money at the last meeting and the ordinance is to cover that part which has not been paid to the city treasurer. A number of people paid cash and the amount that is out will be covered in the ordinance.

Considerable complaint has been heard according to the announcement made to the council against the I. & C. traction company for the manner in which the snow is taken from the company's tracks here in the city and piled up in the streets.
The attention of the street committee had been called to the matter. It is pointed out that the traction company takes the snow from the tracks places it in the center of the street between the tracks. It was stated that this was so high in places that it was impassable to traffic. The street commissioner was instructed to see Will M. Frazee of the traction company and see if other arrangements could not be made in handling the snow. It is thought the matter can be adjusted satisfactory to all concerned.

HAD CLOSE CALL.

A carpenter from this city, employed by the I. & C. had a close call from death yesterday at Gwynne-ville. When the car stopped there he climbed on top of the roof intending to make some repairs and accidentally touched the trolley. The conductor saw the accident and quickly jerked the trolley down. The man was rendered unconscious, but was not badly hurt.

been ill for the past few days, is recovering nicely.

MAYOR OUT OF CITY TODAY

The bonds of James McCormic and P. A. Miller, under arrest, charged with the illegal possession of intoxicating liquor, have not yet been approved by Mayor Bebout. The men have not had a preliminary hearing, nor is the date set for the trial. According to Chief Rosencrance, nothing has been done with the matter. Mayor Bebout was out of the city on business today and it is not known when the two men will be arranged.

The charges against them were read to each yesterday but the matter of bond was not fixed. Mayor Bebout simply intimated that the amount would be $1,000 in each case. It is understood that Mr. Mc-Cormic was in the mayor's office yesterday afternoon ready to give bond, but could not locate Mr. Be-bout.

IS POSTPONED UNTIL NEXT WEEK

Washington's Birthday Program Will
Not be Given by D. A. R. Until After Holiday.

MONDAY TO BE LEGAL HOLIDAY

The regular meeting of the local chapter of the D. A. R., which was to have been held tomorrow and was to have been commemorative of the birth of George Washington, was postponed today until next week, the definite date to be announced later.
Because Washington's birthday falls
on Sunday and will be celebrated Monday, according to the edict of Governor Ralston, it was felt best to hold the meeting next week. A special Washington's birthday program will be carried out in detail.

On Washington's birthday all the banks will close because it is a legal holiday. The postoffice will be closed after ten o'clock in the morning and the city mail carriers will make only one delivery. The rural mail carriers will make no delivery at all.

LIKENS AFFAIR TO BULL FIGHT

United States Senator Gore's Attorney Says The Blind Senator
Was the Matador.

DENOUNCES CONSPIRATORS

Attorneys Agree That Defamation
Suit Shall go to the Jury This Afternoon at Five.

(By United Press.)

Oklahoma City, Okla., Feb. 18.— Attorneys for both sides in the defamation suit against United States Senator Gore today agreed that the case should go to the jury this afternoon at five o'clock.

The affair in the Winston hotel, on which Mrs. Bond bases her charges, was likened to a bull fight by Attorney Roberts, lawyer for Gore.

"They had the ring and the animal
there, when they lead in the matador
in the person of the blind senator,"
he said. "Those other two bulls waited in the other room ready to gore him."

He declared that those behind
Mrs. Bond would give $20,000 for a verdict of one cent damages; $10,- 000 for a hang jury and $5,000 for a signed verdict.

Attorney Roberts said that Oklahoma was on trial. He was violent in his denunciation of the alleged conspirators.

"A snake crawling in the grass,"
he said, "is a giraffe as compared to Robinson."

PATRIOTIC SERVICE.

The pastor, the Rev. Elmer Oldham, and the members of the Fairview Christian church are planning to observe the coming Sunday, Feb.
22, with a patriotic program, an address on the subject of patriotism
taking the place of the usual sermon.
The church will be appropriately decorated and the public is cordially invited to attend both services.

The Success of The Parcel Post

Every one realizes that the Parcel Post is a big success—
so far as is concerned the volume of business it is doing.

But have you stopped to think how great a part the newspapers played in advertising the new service? It was advertising that the Government did not have to pay for because it was legitimate news.

But it was none the less newspaper advertising.

There is not a nook or corner of this country that has not been made familiar with what Uncle Sam is doing and each day the business of the Parcel Post is increasing.

The express companies realize that they must meet not only the competition of rates
but also the competition of advertising. They are facing the situation as practical business men should. They are advertising their own service.

They are using daily newspapers in various parts of the country to do this and in the end will regain a great deal of business that they have allowed to slip away from them in the first rush of the new mail service.

HAS PLENTY OF ROOM TO GROW

Back-to-Soil Movement May Expand
Yet According to U. S. Agriculture Department.

27 PER CENT OF LAND TILLABLE

There Are Still 833,000,000 Acres
Left—Alaskan Strawberries
A Possibility.

(By United Press.)
Washington, Feb. 18.—The "back-to-soil" movement still has plenty of room to grow, according to figures just made public by the Department of Agriculture which show that there are today 823,000,000 acres of tillable land in the United States which has never been turned by a plow. In fact, only twenty-seven per cent of the land of this country capable of being farmed is now under cultivation. The remaining 73 per cent does not include 61,000,000 acres which are non-tilable, but valuable for pasture or fruit growing.

The most thoroughly cultivated states are Illinois and Iowa where for every acre tilled there is 1.6 untilled. Indiana is next with a ratio of one to 1.8; in New York it is one acre tilled to 2.4 untilled, and that proportion is general throughout New England. Arizona has the greatest proportion of untilled land, having 767 available acres idle for every acre on which crops are now raised. In New Mexico it is one to 6.1.

The entire United States, excluding foreign territory, contains about 1,900,000,000 acres. Of this about 60 per cent or 1,114,000,000 acres is estimated to be tillable, including that which, though not tillable at present, may be made so by clearing irrigating or draining. About nineteen per cent is fit only for fruit or forage crops and 21 percent will probably never be of any use from an agricultural standpoint.

An extensive study of methods of preventing the shrinkage of cattle shipped on the hoof has just been concluded by the Department of Agriculture. The methods promise to save hundreds of dollars to the farmers and stock raisers.

Hitherto it has not been uncommon for a steer to reach the stock yards weighing from 60 to 75 pounds less than when it left the farm, but by proper feeding this may be materially reduced.

In 265 shipments of cattle, comprising 19,000 head, the loss ranged from 2.14 to 7 per cent, depending on the length of the time the cattle were enroute, the treatment they received enroute, and what they had in their stomachs when they started. Steers show less shrinkage than cows but the difference is not as great as many shippers suppose.

"If cattle are to be in transit 24 hours or longer, it is a good plan to feed about two bales of nice bright hay for each earload a few hours before loading," is the advice of the Department. "There is no way of entirely preventing shrinkage, but by judicious care in the handling and feeding the cattle just previous to shipping the shrinkage may be lessened. The shrinkage of feed cattle does not differ greatly from that of range cattle fed for equal periods of time. Cattle fed on silage have a large gross shrinkage but usually 'fill' so well when fed at the market that the net shrinkage is small. Pulp fed cattle shrink more in transit than any other class of cattle and also show a greater net shrinkage. For a long journey the common method of unloading for feed water and rest is preferred to the use of 'feed and water' cars."

Efforts to dodge the boll weevil by planting cotton late have been proved fruitless by the government bureau of entomology, in spite of the theory that prevails very generally through the south. In fact the most recent experiment along this line shows that late crops are a decided disadvantage. In one field in Louisiana last year 1125 pounds were picked from an acre that had been planted early, while in an adjoining field that had been planted late the yield was but 650 pounds per acre. In another instance a field planted May 22 produced but one-fourth of a bale per acre, though in 1911 when planted a month earlier it gave half a bale to the acre.

Chickens and potatoes and even strawberries and currants from Alaska are among the possibilities of the future, says the Department of Agriculture, which is conducting a series of experiments in that country. One of its four stations there is within 75 miles of the Arctic circle, and even there many varieties of cereals and vegetables have been grown.

Altogether there are approximately 100,000 square miles of tillable land in Alaska and the territorial homestead laws allow the settled to file on 320 acres. The greatest drawback is that only a small percentage of this land is along the southern coast where the climate is least severe, the mountainth there being very near the coast line.

The Department also reports fully on the dreary side of life for the insular farmer. The spring thaws make travel impossible, the long winters require frost buildings for people and livestock, the gnats and mosquitos make the summers almost unendurable at seasons, and the land must be cleared of much heavy moss which hurts the crops if plowed under.

PLAINTIFF GIVEN DIVORCE

Lysander Strickler of Knightstown
Won Suit Against Wife.

Lysander Strickler of Knightstown was granted a divorce yesterday in the Hancock circuit court from Cora Strickler and given the custody of their two minor children. The complaint alleged that his wife left their home in company with other men and on one of these occasions went to Ohio. In a cross-complaint Mrs. Strickler alleged that he would not work or pay the rent and as a result they were forced to move five and six times each year. She claimed that he spent his money playing pool. Mrs. Strickler also stated that he threatened to kill her.

REVOKES HIS AUTHORITY

Proposed Bill Prohibits Postmaster General From Making Rates.

(By United Press.)

Washington, Feb. 18.—Despite Federal opposition by friends of the parcel post law, the Senate postoffice committee today reported the annual budget bill for the mail service with a provision revoking the postmaster general's authority to fix parcel post rates. The "joker," as the amendment is termed by Representative David J. Lewis, author of the parcel post law, will be strenuously fought on the floor of the senate.

All Aboard.

Such sentiments as were expressed at last night's meeting of the Chamber of Commerce, once acted upon, will make Rushville the equal of Waterloo, Iowa, a town whose environment was exactly like Rushville, but which, with a good organization, had a good steady growth and tripled its population in ten years. The United census figures furnish ample proof for this.

The Chamber of Commerce has the right ring to it, as every person at the meeting last night agreed. It has a large prospective. This is absolutely necessary. It is true but true that no individual—and the same applies to a collection of individuals—will reach any higher pinnacle than that to which he aspires.

The board of directors was elected last night and they are all able and capable men who have the best interests of Rushville and Rush county at heart. It is not right that there should be a feeling that much of the burden of the responsibility of making the Chamber of Commerce a successful venture should fall on their shoulders. It lies primarily with the individual.

Judge John D. Megee struck a chord that resounded with truth when he said that an organization of this character was like a church in that its ultimate character depended on whether or not the individual was right. Once they are working in the right spirit—that of co-operation and compromise—the future of the chamber is absolutely certain.

John A. Tittsworth also made a very worthy suggestion that no member could accomplish more good than by stopping criticism. That is a matter of individuals that no board of directors can correct. One individual may enter with another into a careful consideration of a subject pertaining to the organization after unjust and thoughtless, unfair comment have been passed and convince the unjust that compromise will always be crowned with success.

Political dopsters are making much comment on the fact that there were only 300 men, women and children at the Progressive love feast in Indianapolis last Saturday and two days preceding there were two thousand, conservatively estimated, at the Republican meeting. Ex-Senator Beveridge was billed to speak at the Progressive meeting, but he never opened his mouth. It is being wondered in Indiana whether he was so chagrined that he could not speak.

President of National Municipal

New Organization.

MUTUAL PART ILLUSIONARY

(By United Press.)

Hartford, Conn., Feb. 18.—Little publicity was given in the morning newspapers today to an attack on the Associated Press last night made here by William Dudley Foulke of Richmond, Ind., president of the National Municipal League and former chairman of the United States civil service commission.

Foulke discussed in detail the inside workings of the Associated Press. He quoted sections of the by-laws and said it was perfectly clear that the control of the corporation could be kept in the hands of a few persons, themselves often directors.

He said the "purely mutual" character of the organization was illusory. He referred at length to the application of the New York Sun to the Federal government for an investigation of the Associated Press.

ROCKEFELLER'S TAX
UP TO $35,000,000Cleveland Has Found Another Way to Figure It.

Cleveland, Feb. 18.—With an adding machine, Tax Commissioners Fackler and Agnew have shut themselves in their office preparing a personal property tax list for John D. Rockefeller.

"We are tabulating such information about Rockefeller's personal property as we have collected so that when we get his tax return, if we do get it, we will be able to check up on it," said Fackler.

A provision in the 1914 tax laws, just discovered, gives taxers the power to list Rockefeller's $900,000,000 for each year beginning with 1911 and make him pay taxes on the entire amount, plus a 50 per cent penalty for failure to make a return each year.

The aggregate sum that Rockefeller could be taxed on then would be over $3,000,000,000. The $900,000,000 would be multiplied by the tax rate for each year and the penalty added, so that the total tax which might be assessed against Rockefeller would be nearly $35,000,000.

The taxers are handicapped because the adding machine they have adds only five columns of figures.

LAY DOWN RULES FOR GIRLS' TEAM

Must Take all Rough Stuff and Say Nothing Back According to Head of Department.

A LITTLE SLANG ALLOWED.

(By United Press.)

South Bend, Ind., Feb. 18—If a member of the girls' high school basket ball team here gets a slap in the face and says anything rough back, it won't go. She must not leave her gum outside her locker. She must not tear up notes in the gym. "It's wrong to do these things, because it isn't lady-like, and we must be lady-like," was the convincing argument that won the girls over to the new rules of the gym.

The head of the physical training department, Miss Goodman, told the girls that the best words they used while playing games approached pretty close to profanity. She said she did not object to a little slang now and then, such as "rats" or "Oh pshaw", but that the stronger words were mannish and should be omitted.

But the real reason the girls consented so readily to the new rules was that they were told it would set a good example for the young men. The new motto adopted is "Cleanliness in Everything."

AN INCREASE IS ALMOST CERTAIN

Assessed Valuations of Property, Especially Real Estate Predicted by Tax Commissioner.

IN THE RICHMOND MEETING

Taxing Officials of Sixth District Hearing Addresses Thursday on Methods.

Increases in assessed valuation of property, especially real estate, will be ordered in many counties of the state after the 1914 assessments have been taken, it was predicted by state tax commissioner members Tuesday at the Sixth district meeting of taxing officials held at Richmond yesterday.

There were about seventy assessors, including township and county assessors and their deputies from the counties comprising the Sixth district. They were addressed by the three members of the state tax commission, Mouck Wolcott and Link.

John F. Moses, Rush county assessor, although this county is in the district which met at Richmond, did not attend yesterday because it was more convenient to attend a similar meeting held at Greensburg today.

Mr. Link covered the ground completely and said that the promise of the tax commissioner to equalize assessments in all counties of the state, would be carried out. Many counties, especially some of the wealthier ones escape paying their share of the state tax which is of uniform rate in all counties, by lowering the valuations when assessments are made. The local tax rates are increased to make up the difference.

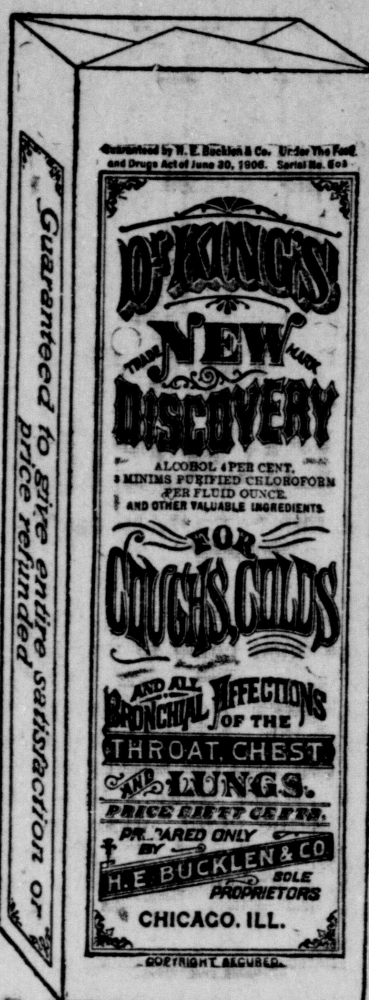

Mr. Link said that assessors had been ordered last year to assess all real estate and personal property at its actual value and deduct twenty-five per cent. in entering the value for taxation. With this rule carried out there was an increase of $36,000,000 over the previous year, in the assessed value of the property. "You assessors assess the poor working man, the clerk, the farm tenant and the renter for all the property he has at its actual value. But when it comes to the corporation and wealthy firms and persons, concessions are made. I leave it to your sense of fair play to equalize the assessment rates."

The tax commissioners said that less than one half of the automobiles of the state are entered for taxation. They emphasized the fact that the state license is not a tax and automobiles must be taxes. Lists will be furnished assessors this year.

woman who had signed that contract had an idea that they were agreeing to stand together for the betterment of the city and county.

Howard E. Barrett said that Rush county had the best of everything and that an organization such as the present one could accomplish wonders when such a body of men as the present one stood together for the best interests of the community.

Later in the meeting he told of an experience he had in Michigan where he had an interest in some land. A question arose about the use of a road and there was some discussion. There they had a county committee of twenty-one which took up the question and considered it. The committee gave its findings and the community abided by it. He said this was only one example of what working together will do, where the individual can do nothing.

Dr. D. D. VanOsdel declared that he was in hearty accord with everything which had been said and that he would work for the good of the organization. He said it would do wonders.

F. E. Wolcott said he believed the organization should include Rush county and that it should be wide in its viewpoint. He said there was no reason why farmers and townspeople can't both be benefited by working together.

Hugh Manzy declared that the directors should see big things if big things were to be accomplished. He asserted that the Chamber of Commerce should not be a merchants association alone, but that it should have a larger viewpoint.

report to the council stating that things at the plant were coming along nicely and that he was getting it in better shape each day.

The council did not allow any of the claims handed them by the old council last night. Most of the old bills have been paid but there still remains the salaries of the officials, including the money due former Mayor Black, all the councilmen, the water and light superintendent and the chief of police. Claims and salaries were paid last night amounting to about $1,000.

The question of a water meter for the Manzy Company's elevator was again discussed. It was at first stated that a meter would cost $250 but it has since been learned that by reducing the size of the main to three inches a meter could be purchased for $60. The city clerk was instructed to again notify the firm to install a meter or make other arrangements for operating the elevator. The council believed that Mr. Manzy would install a meter at this cost. The elevator question has caused considerable discussion and the action of the council last night was said to be final.

SEVEN KEYS TO BY EARL DERR BIGGERS

Copyright, 1913, by the Bobbs-Merrill Company

"I'm desperate," said Magee. "Henry Zabol Lodge must come to me, I say, with tears in his eyes. Ever see the senator that way? No? It isn't going to be an easy job. I must put it over. I must go deep into the hearts of men up here and write what I find. No more shots in the night. Just the adventure of soul and soul. Do you see? By the way, here's $20, your first week's pay as caretaker of a New York Quixote."

"What's that?" asked Quimby. "Quixote," explained Mr. Magee. "was a Spanish lad who was a little confused in his mind and went about the country putting up at summer resorts in midwinter."

"I'd expect it of a Spaniard," Quimby said. "Be careful of that fire. I'll be up in the morning." He stowed away the bill Mr. Magee had given him. "I guess nothing will interfere with your loneliness. Leastways I hope it won't. Good night."

Mr. Magee bade the man good night and listened to the thump of his boots and the closing of the great front door. From his windows he watched the caretaker move down the road without looking back, to disappear at last in the white night.

Throwing off his great coat, Mr. Magee noisily attacked the fire. The blaze flared red on his strong, humorous mouth, in his smiling eyes. Next, in the flickering half light of suit 7 he distributed the contents of his traveling bags about. On the table he placed a number of new magazines and a few books.

Then Mr. Magee sat down in the big leather chair before the fire and caught his breath.

Yes, here he was, and here was the solitude he had come to find. Mr. Magee looked nervously about, and the smile died out of his gray eyes. For the first time misgivings smote him. Might one not have too much of a good thing? A silence like that of the tomb had descended. He recalled stories of men who went mad from loneliness. What place lonelier than this? The wind howled along the balcony; it rattled the windows. Outside his door lay a great black cave, in summer gay with men and maids, now like Crusoe's island before the old man landed. "Alone, alone; all, all alone," quoted Mr. Magee. "If I can't think here it will be because I'm not equipped with the apparatus. I will. I'll show the gloomy old critics! I wonder what's doing in New York?"

New York! Mr. Magee looked at his watch. Eight o'clock. The great street was ablaze. The crowds were parading from the restaurants to the theaters. The electric signs were pasting lurid legends on a long suffering sky; the taxis were spraying throats with gasoline; the traffic cop at Broadway and Forty-second street was madly earning his pay. Mr. Magee got up and walked the floor. New York!

Probably the telephone in his rooms was jangling, vainly calling forth to sport with Amaryllis in the shade of the rubber trees Billy Magee—Billy Magee who sat alone in the silence on Baldpate mountain. Few knew of his departure. This was the night of that stupid attempt at theatricals at the Plaza, stupid in itself, but gay, almost giddy, since Helen Faulkner was to be there. This was the night of the dinner to Carey at the club. This was the night—of many diverting things.

He strode to the window and looked down at the few dim lights that proclaimed the existence of Upper Asquewan Falls. Somewhere down there was the Commercial House; somewhere the girl who had wept so bitterly in that gloomy little waiting room. She was only three miles away, and the thought cheered Mr. Magee. After all, he was not on a desert island.

And yet he was alone, intensely, almost painfully, alone—alone in a vast moaning house that must be his only home until he could go back to the gay city with his masterpiece. What a masterpiece! As though with a surgeon's knife it would lay bare the hearts of men. No tricks of plot, no—

CHAPTER III.

The Crack of a Pistol.

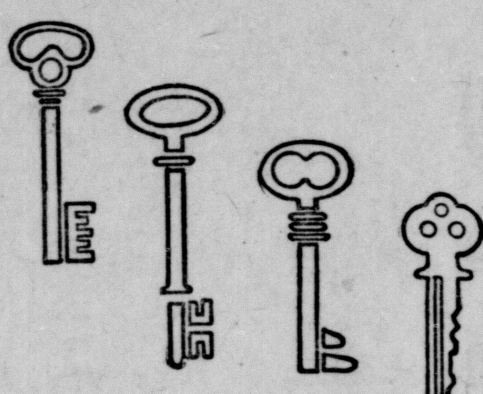

MR. MAGEE paused. For sharply in the silence the bell of his room telephone rang out.

He stood for a moment gazing in wonder, his heart beating swiftly, his eyes upon the instrument on the wall. It was a house phone. He knew it could only be rung from the switchboard in the hall below. "I'm going mad already," he remarked and took down the receiver.

A blur of talk, an electric muttering, a click, and all was still.

Mr. Magee opened the door and stepped out into the shadows. He heard a voice below. Noiselessly he crept to the landing and gazed down into the office. A young man sat at the telephone switchboard. Mr. Magee could see in the dim light of a solitary candle that he was a person of rather hilarious raiment. The candle stood on the top of the safe, and the door of the latter swung open. Sinking down on the steps in the dark, Mr. Magee waited.

SEVEN KEYS TO BALDPATE

"Hello," the young man was saying; "how do you work this thing, anyhow? I've tried every peg but the right one. Hello, hello! I want long distance—Reuton, 2876 West—Mr. Andy Rutter. Will you get him for me, sister?"

Another wait—a long one—ensued. The candle sputtered. The young man fidgeted in his chair. At last he spoke again:

"Hello! Andy? Is that you, Andy? What's the good word? As quiet as the tomb of Napoleon? Shall I close up shop? Sure? What next? Oh, see here, Andy, I'd die up here! Did you ever hit a place like this in winter? I can't—oh, well, if he says so! Yes; I could do that. But no longer. I couldn't stand it long. Tell him that. Tell him everything's O. K. Yes. All right. Well, good night, Andy."

He turned away from the switchboard, and as he did so Mr. Magee walked calmly down the stairs toward him. With a cry the young man ran to the safe, threw a package inside and swung shut the door. He turned the knob of the safe several times; then he faced Mr. Magee. The latter saw something glitter in his hand.

"Good evening," remarked Mr. Magee pleasantly.

"What are you doing here?" cried the youth wildly.

"I live here," Mr. Magee assured him. "Won't you come up to my room—it's right at the head of the stairs. I have a fire, you know."

Back into the young man's lean, hawklike face crept the assurance that belonged with the gay attire he wore. He dropped the revolver into his pocket and smiled a sneering smile.

"You gave me a turn," he said. "Of course you live here. Are any of the other guests about? And who won the tennis match today?"

"You are facetious," Mr. Magee smiled too. "So much the better. A lively companion is the very sort I should have ordered tonight. Come upstairs."

"All right," he said. "But I'll have to ask you to go first. You know the way." His right hand sought the pocket into which the revolver had fallen.

"You honor my poor and drafty house," said Mr. Magee. "This way."

He mounted the stairs. After him followed the youth of flashy habits, looking fearfully about him as he went. He seemed surprised that they came to Magee's room without incident. Inside, Mr. Magee drew up an easy chair before the fire and offered his guest a cigar.

"You must be cold," he said. "Sit here. A bad night, stranger, as they remark in stories."

"You've said it," replied the young man, accepting the cigar. "Thanks." He walked to the door leading into the hall and opened it about a foot. "I'm afraid," he explained jocosely, "we'll get to talking and miss the breakfast bell." He dropped into the chair and lighted his cigar at a candle end. "Say, you never can tell, can you? Climbing up old Baldpate I thought to myself that hotel certainly makes the Sahara desert look like a cozy corner. And here you are, as snug and comfortable and at home as if you were in a Harlem flat. You never can tell. And what now? The story of my life?"

"You might relate," Mr. Magee told him, "that portion of it that has led you trespassing on a gentleman seeking seclusion at Baldpate inn."

"Trespassing, eh?" said the young man. "Far be it from me to quarrel with a man who smokes as good cigars as you do, but there's something I haven't quite doped out. That is—whose trespassing me or you?"

"My right here," said Mr. Magee, "is indisputable."

"It's a big word," replied the other, "but you can tack it to my right here and tell no lie. We can't dispute, so let's drop the matter. With that settled I'm encouraged to pour out the story of why you see me here tonight, far from the madding crowd. Have you a stray tear? You'll need it. It's a sad, touching story, concerned with haberdashery and a trusting heart, and a fair woman—fair, but, oh, how false!"

"Proceed," laughed Mr. Magee. "I'm an admirer of the vivid imagination. Don't curb yours, I beg of you."

"It's all straight," said the other in a hurt tone. "Every word true. My name is Joseph Bland. My profession, until love entered my life, was that of haberdasher and outfitter. In the city of Reuton, fifty miles from here, I taught the Beau Brummels of the thoroughfares what was doing in London in the necktie line. I sold them coats with padded shoulders and collars high and awe inspiring. I was happy, twisting a piece of silk over my hand to show them how it would look on their heaving bosoms. And then—she came."

Mr. Bland puffed on his cigar. "Yes," he said, "Arabella sparked on the horizon of my life. When I have been here in the quiet for about two centuries, maybe I can do justice to her beauty. I won't attempt to describe her now. I loved her—madly. She said I made a hit with her. I spent on her the profits of my haberdashery. I whispered—marriage. She didn't scream. I had my wedding necktie picked out from the samples of a drummer from Troy."

"From here on—the tear I spoke of, please. There flashed on the scene a man she had known and loved in Jersey City. I said flashed. He did—just that. A swell dresser—say, he had John Drew beat by two mauve neckties and a purple frock coat. I had a haberdashery back of me. No use. He outdressed me. I saw that Arabella's love for me was waning. With his chamois gloved hands that new guy fanned the ancient flame."

He paused. Emotion—or the smoke of the cigar—choked him.

"Let's make the short story shorter," he said. "She threw me down. In my haberdashery I thought it over. I was blue, bitter. I resolved on a dreadful step. In the night I wrote her a letter and carried it down to the box and posted it. Life without Arabella, said the letter, was Shakespeare with Hamlet left out. It hinted at the river, carbolic acid, revolvers. Yes; I posted it. And then—"

"And then," urged Mr. Magee. "Mr. Bland felt tenderly of the horse-shoe pin in his purple tie."

"This is just between us," he said. "At that point the trouble began. It came from my being naturally a very brave man. I could have died—easy. The brave thing was to live. To go on day after day devoid of Arabella—say, that took courage. I wanted to try it. I'm a courageous man, as I say."

"You seem so," Mr. Magee agreed.

"Lion hearted," assented Mr. Bland.

"I determined to show my nerve and live. But there was my letter to Arabella. I feared she wouldn't appreciate my bravery. Women are dull sometimes. It came to me maybe she would be hurt if I didn't keep my word and die. So I had to—disappear. I had a friend mixed up in affairs at Baldpate. No; I can't give his name. I told him my story. He was impressed by my spirit, as you have been. He gave me a key he had—the key of the door opening from the east veranda into the dining room. So I came up here. I came here to be alone, to forgive and forget, to be forgot. And maybe to plan a new haberdashery in distant parts."

"Was it your wedding necktie," asked Mr. Magee, "that you threw into the safe when you saw me coming?"

"No," replied Mr. Bland, sighing deeply. "A package of letters, written to me by Arabella at various times. I want to forget 'em. If I kept them on hand I might look at them from time to time. My great courage might give away. You might find my body on the stairs. That's why I hid them."

Mr. Magee laughed and stretched forth his hand.

"Believe me," he said, "your touching confidence in me will not be betrayed. I congratulate you on your narrative power. You want my story. Why am I here? I am not sure that it is worthy to follow yours. But it has its good points—as I have thought it out."

He went over to the table and picked up a popular novel upon which his gaze had rested while the haberdasher spun his fabric of love and gloom. On the cover was a picture of a very dashing maiden.

"Do you see that girl?" he asked. "She is beautiful, is she not? Even Arabella in her most splendid moments could get a few points from her. I fancy. Perhaps you are not familiar with the important part such a picture plays in the success of a novel today. The truth is, however, that the noble art of fiction writing has come to lean more and more heavily on its illustrations. The mere words that go with the pictures grow less important every day. There are dozens of distinguished novelists in the country at this moment who might be haberdashers if it weren't for the long, lean, haughty ladies who are scattered tastefully through their works."

Mr. Bland stirred uneasily. "I can see you are at loss to know what my search for seclusion and privacy has to do with all this," continued Mr. Magee. "I am an artist. For years I have drawn these lovely ladies who make fiction salable to the masses. Many a novelist owes his motorcar and his country house to my brush. Two months ago I determined to give up illustration forever and devote my time to painting. I turned my back on the novelists. Can you imagine what happened?"

"My imagination's a little tired," apologized Mr. Bland.

"Never mind. I'll tell you. The leading authors whose work I had so long illustrated saw ruin staring them in the face. They came to me on their knees, figuratively. They begged. They pleaded. In order to escape them and their really pitiful pleadings I had to flee. I happened to have a friend involved in the management of Baldpate inn. I am not at liberty to give his name. He gave me a key. So here I am. I rely on you to keep my secret. If you perceive a novelist in the distance lose no time in warning me."

Mr. Magee paused, chuckling inwardly. He stood looking down at the lovelorn haberdasher. The latter got to his feet and solemnly took Magee's hand.

"I—I—oh, well, you've got me beat a mile, old man," he said.

"You don't mean to say"—began the hurt Magee.

"Oh, that's all right," Mr. Bland assured him. "I believe every word of it. It's all as real as the haberdashery to me. I'll keep my eye peeled for novelists. What gets me is, when you boil our two fly by night stories down, I've come here to be alone. You want to be alone. We can't be alone here together. One of us must clear out."

"Nonsense," answered Billy Magee. "I'll be glad to have you here. Stay as long as you like."

The haberdasher looked Mr. Magee fully in the eye, and the latter was startled by the hostility he saw in the other's face.

"The point is," said Mr. Bland. "I don't want you here. Why? Maybe because you recall beautiful dames—on book covers—and in that way, Arabella. Maybe—but what's the use? I put it simply. I got to be alone—alone on Baldpate mountain. I won't put you out tonight!"

"See here, my friend," cried Mr. Magee, "your grief has turned your head. You won't put me out tonight or tomorrow. I'm here to stay. You're welcome to do the same, if you like. But you stay—with me. I know you are a man of courage, but it would take at least ten men of courage to put me out of Baldpate inn."

They stood eying each other for a moment. Bland's thin lips twisted into a sneer. "We'll see," he said. "We'll settle all that in the morning." His tone took on a more friendly aspect. "I'm going to pick out a downy couch in one of these rooms," he said, "and lay me down to sleep. Say, I could greet a blanket like a long lost friend."

Mr. Magee proffered some of the covers that Quimby had given him and accompanied Mr. Bland to suit 10, across the hall. With a brisk good night Mr. Magee returned to No. 7.

But he made no move toward the chilly brass bed in the inner room. Instead he sat a long time by the fire. He reflected on the events of his first few hours in that supposedly uninhabited solitude where he was to be alone with his thoughts. He pondered the way and manner of the flippant young man who posed as a lovelorn haberdasher and under whose diplomacy there was certainly an air of hostility. Who was Andy Rutter, down in Reuton? What did the young man mean when he asked if he should "close up shop?" Who was "he" from whom came the orders, and, most important of all, what was in the package now resting in the great safe?

Mr. Magee smiled. Was this the stuff of which solitude was made?

He threw off his dressing gown and began to unlace his shoes.

"There has been too much crude melodrama in my novels," he reflected. "It's so easy to write. But I'm going to get away from all that up here. I'm going!"

Mr. Magee paused, with one shoe poised in his hand. For from below came the sharp crack of a pistol, followed by the crash of breaking glass.

MAKING SURVEY FOR BARGE CANAL

Huntington People Believe Project Will Be Extended From Toledo to Chicago.

TO FORM AN ORGANIZATION.

(By United Press.)
Huntington, Ind., Feb. 18—Both the farmers, and the citizens of this city are interested in the plans of furthering the barge canal project from Toledo to Chicago, and it will pass through this city.

One of the evidences of government interest is the presence of government surveyors, who for several weeks have been working out of Ft. Wayne and Huntington. These men are making a preliminary survey of two possible routes, the northern and the southern. Their reports, of course, are not published, but are forwarded to the department at Washington.

The Huntington advocates of the canal say the route from Toledo, partly in the Maumee river and partly over the path of the Old Wabash-Erie canal probably will be adopted. They say also that the canal cannot follow the northern route, because its course passed over the highest point between the Wabash river and the Great Lakes basin. At the top the water supply is naturally limited. Advocates of the northern route, however, say that route will be chosen because it is more direct than this route suggested through Huntington.

An effort is in progress to interest the whole northern part of the state in the canal project for the reason that, no matter what route it passes over, it will affect freight rates for the whole northern part of the state.

When an organization is formed, the purpose will be to influence congressmen to work for the canal.

WANT ADS BRING RESULTS

TO REGULATE ALL BILLBOARDS

Committee Working on Problem Will Probably Recommend Law to State Legislature.

BRINGS IN LARGE REVENUE.

Would License all Boards and Regulate all Advertising Matter. That Goes on Them.

(By United Press.)
Indianapolis, Ind., Feb. 18—If the communities now working on the bill board problem get what they started out after, the result probably will be a recommendation to the state legislature that it pass a law regulating billboards. Members of a committee appointed to investigate the legal status of the billboard discovered, they said today, that while there is an ordinance in this city governing it, it has no legal status in the state.

One of these committeemen told the United Press that no revenue is obtained by the city or state from the two large companies doing business in Indianapolis, and that the only outlay these companies are put to is a nominal rental to the owner of the vacant lot and the cost of billboards.

As an indication of the size of this industry, it was reported that the value of the billboards in Indianapolis alone was $150,000, and that the annual revenue accruing to the companies gave them a handsome dividend.

"Probably the only way to regulate the billboard problem will be through a state law," said a member of the committee. This committee springs from a new organization—so new that it has not been named. It was formed to fight unsightly billboards. "We can hardly expect to touch the matter in Indianapolis in any other way, for it would be unreasonable to think that we can change the new building case so recently perfected."

His idea was that a state law fixing a license for billboards would allow every city in the state to regulate the problem better, for it could tax the companies and, under the proposed law, could regulate the size and appearance of the boards and the nature of the pictures and advertising matter placed on them.

This committeeman said he had been to the city building and there had discovered that apparently the two local companies were observing the law, which merely stated that a permit must be obtained for the erection of a billboard.

Another meeting of the new organization will be held next Friday night. At that time, if it is decided that the agitation for regulated billboards must be state-wide, there probably will be a committee appointed with the end in view of interesting civic bodies in the Chamber of Commerce, the Woman's Department Club, the Church Federation, the Indianapolis Art Association, the Indianapolis Park Board, the Indianapolis Federation of Public School Teachers and of clubs represented in the Federation of Civic Associations.

BOXING GAME IS ALMOST AT END

Sport in Indiana is Paralyzed as Result of Action of Mayor
Bell in Clamping Lid.

SAME THING AT EVANSVILLE.

(By United Press.)

Indianapolis, Ind., Feb. 18.—One of Indiana's flourishing industries is gradually becoming paralyzed. There is already a partial paralysis of the boxing game. Sport circles thought it bad enough when Mayor Bell stopped the game in Indianapolis—that was paralysis of the heart. Mayor Ben Bosse has now stopped the game in Evansville. They consider it almost adding insult to injury when the disease spreads to the extremities.

Lovers of the manly art of self-defense are wondering how long it will be until Indiana is in a class with its lonely neighbor Illinois, where the only way to see a fight is to go into the alley or join the lodge the mayor belongs to. They are disgusted with the prospect of having Jack Dillon and Jimmy Clabby win undisputed title to the middle weight belt and then being forced to go up to Wisconsin or some other deserted spot to see this champion knock aspirants over the ropes.

Mayor Bosse didn't say much when he put the lid on, but it was sufficient.

"I'm against the game. I talked to Mayor Bell about it in Indianapolis. There will be nothing during my administration."

There now, he gave it away. It's all Mayor Bell's fault.

Washington, Feb. 18.—Debates on the woman suffrage amendment which began in the Senate this afternoon enabled Senator Bristow of Kansas to fire a hot shot at President Wilson because of his position that he will not favor a suffrage amendment since the Democratic party had no plank upon it.

He referred to the "one-term" plank in the Democratic platform and asked whether the President would interpret it the same way.

Charges of Intimidation.

New York, Feb. 18.—Charges that Assistant United States District Attorney Claude A. Thompson intimidated and kept out of the country material witnesses are the basis for a motion for a new trial in the case of Albert Freeman, who with Julian Hawthorne and Dr. William J. Morton, was convicted on March 14, 1913, of using the mails to defraud. Freeman is out on bail of $150,000 pending an appeal in his case.

MRS. WALKER STILL WANTS AUTOMOBILE

Withdraws Petition Asking Possession of Personal Property With Exception of Machine.

ARGUE MOTION FOR NEW TRIAL

Judge Megee heard the argument on a motion for a new trial in the case of William Reddington against the American Creosoting company this morning. The question was taken under advisement by the court. Reddington was given judgment for $1,550 by a jury when the case was tried here several months ago and the motion for a new trial has been pending for some time. Reddington alleged that he lost a number of hogs because the Creosoting company used a public ditch for a drain to its plant. He has another suit of a similar nature pending in court here. The cases were sent here on a change of venue from Hancock county.

Mrs. Alberta Walker withdrew her petition asking possession of personal property, with the exception of the automobile, in the case of Washington Tyler against A. P. Walker, asking for a receiver. The petition was heard some time ago and Mrs. Walker alleged that the personal property, including the auto belonged to her, and the receiver had no right to it. She still wants possession of the auto.

The viewers in the Voorhees Cavitt drain case were dismissed by the court for failure to report and new ones appointed. The viewers are Henry Beckner, Rush G. Budd and Adolphus Cameron. Mr. Budd qualified as drain commissioner this morning.

Was Frustrated.

(By United Press.)

El Paso, Texas, Feb. 18.—Maximo Castillo, Mexican bandit, who wrecked the Cumbre tunnel and then permitted the Mexican Northwestern passenger train to run into it and cost the life of fifty-three persons, will reach Fort Bliss late today with six comrades who were captured with him.

General Villa, Rebel leader, announced today that his troops had frustrated a plot to throw a bomb in his sleeping apartments and assassinate him. Several suspects are under arrest. Villa insists that the plot was instigated by some wealthy families in Mexico.

UNDER A DOUBLE SENTENCE

One Calls For Life Imprisonment, the Other For Death.

Jefferson City, Mo., Feb. 18.—James Schrumm, serving a ninety-nine-year sentence in the penitentiary for murder in the first degree, has been sentenced by the supreme court to be hanged April 3 for a second murder. The case is without a parallel in the history of Missouri.

June 22, 1912, Schrumm shot and killed Mont Hall and Jent Gibson in St. Francois county. He was first tried for the murder of Gibson, convicted of murder in the first degree and sentenced to life imprisonment. He was next tried for the murder of Hall, convicted of murder in the first degree and sentenced to death. Following the first conviction he was brought to the penitentiary.

The wife and daughter of Schrumm claimed that Gibson and Hall had called at their home while Schrumm and his son, Harvey, were absent, and insulted and frightened them badly. They sent for the father and son, who followed the men and killed them. The son was sentenced for twenty-five years.

Frank Maintains His Innocence.

Atlanta, Ga., Feb. 18.—"I am an innocent man and I do not think I should hang for a crime that I never committed," said Leo M. Frank when told that the Georgia supreme court had sustained the verdict of the lower court, which sentenced him to death for the murder of fourteen-year-old Mary Phagan, who was killed in the pencil factory of which Frank was superintendent.
